Social Media 101

Almost every students and parent may think social media helps with people learning and talking, but to some students and parents they think social media ruins eye to eye contact. Most parents and students will use the ABC mouse, Outschool, and many others to teach/learn better and others may be able to teach/learn better from the books. But it helps them learn both ways learning by the books or technology. Technology may leads people down the road of [redacted], identity theft, getting bullied, and introducing predators into their lives (Brindley).

However, technology might be able to help in our daily lives like make schedules, simplify work and home activities, coordinate activities, when your favorite TV show is on. Ultimately, technology can help you do many things in life, and it's amazing the things the digital world can do for us. Online calendars, for example, help coordinate everyone's schedules and can be accessed by a variety of devices. Google Calendar is a great one to try. Cell phones also allow families to text updates on their activities, practices, family problems and even grocery lists. No one can remember how hard it was to organize schedules without cell phones, much less create to-do lists.

Teachers, as well as other professionals, are able to use class websites or apps like Class Dojo and Google Classroom to keep parents updated about school or workers informed about work sites/expectations. Therefore, when workers/students see these, they talk to other people making more conversations (Trufekci).

Many parents are busy and being able to pay bills and taxes online helps in so many ways. One may pay their bill at 11:30 while watching your kids play and not miss something adorable. When they say something funny or walk for the first time.

Texting could ruin eye to eye contact or writing a essay or school paper. Cause nowadays people text Ily,Imy.Ttyl, and ect. If people didn't take the easy way out of life. If we all use proper grammar then we could possibly improve our grammar.

If teachers used books instead of technology they may be able to teacher their students easy, but the students may get bored faster. Teachers that use Google Classroom or Class Dojo students, may get distracted by getting on games or social media. Some students and parents think using both will help teach from the book but have fun activities on internet. If teachers did it the book and internet way students might have a little fun in class.

Social Media is very addictive to teens and young adults. When he/she hears the phone bus or ring they check it right away. It might make you get deactivated when driving and make you crash, it might make you forget your food in the stove and burn down your house , and possible you might forget to go to a important doctor appointment.

Everyone has his/her own opinion; some may think it's good and some may think it's bad. However, if anyone doesn't have any social media accounts, maybe some of this material might help. We should let people keep their own opinions. If someone ever tries to change another person, we should just tell them to believe what they want.

Is Homeschooling More Educational?

Wouldn't it be great to wear P.J.'s to school? If a student wanted to wear PJs to school homeschooling would be a great idea for that person, but homeschooling has so many more great things about it. For example, getting to see their guardians more, not having to buy so many clothes when it's time to go back to school, and not worrying about people always being down their backs. And, in a students' point of view, education at home is mainly a good idea. But to guardians' point of view, that situation isn't so great most the time because of the high prices for textbooks and necessary tests.

To be more specific about homeschooling cost, let's look at data from HSLDA's website. According to their data, homeschooling can be either just as expensive or more expensive than public school. To be not as expensive, guardians may use materials, such as library material or group materials; this means not buying materials.¹

If guardians need help teaching their kids, they might use ABCmouse, BJU Press Homeschool, Audio Memory, etc.² You can always get advice from other homeschoolers or websites for helpful tools. Guardians may still have concerns if they have the money or resources because they may not understand the subject and might worry their kids won't be as social as they could be in public school.
